The Sandwich Islands are for sale. Price $14,000,000. An exchange says the property consists of "two sugar houses, one extinct volcano and 700 cases of epoxy, all in middling repair."

The democratic governor and legislature of Texas show so much incompetency in governing the state that the legislature has to be constantly called together in extra session. A second special session of the present body is contemplated.

The Augusta (Georgia) Chronicle, democratic, says: "The democracy must make a net gain of five seats to have a majority in the Senate of 1887. Where are they coming from?" The sharpest democratic statesmen can not tell where they are coming from. They are not coming at all. The republicans will hold the Senate during the Cleveland administration.

The noted blind preacher, the Rev. William H. Milburn, has been chosen chaplain of the house of representatives. For many years Mr. Milburn was an active Methodist minister, riding the circuit although completely blind. He was elected chaplain of the house when only twenty three years of age, and held that position for consecutive sessions. At one time he was considered one of the most eloquent preachers in this country, and during a lecturing tour through England in 1859 drew larger audiences than any American orator that had visited that country previous to his time. He lectured at Court Street church in Janesville, five years ago, but his effort at that time was not up to his best.

According to the Washington Post, the official organ of the administration, the postmaster general is receiving complaints from the newly appointed fourth class democratic postmasters all over the country that they are being boycotted by the republicans. The latter are accused of supplying themselves with stamps from the large cities and of mailing their letters on the cars. In some places, also, they have banded together and refuse to rent boxes, and adopted other "freeze out" methods. The income of a fourth class postmaster depends upon his cancellations and sale of stamps, and consequently this method of boycotting, if persisted in, would deprive such officers of a good share of their legitimate pay. It cannot be claimed that this is a very manly way to express disgust with a democratic national administration, but the wormit it gives these newly made postmasters, who imagine that their troubles were at an end when they received their appointments, will not escape the sense of humor of the American people. And Postmaster General Vilas proposes to dignify these complaints by calling the attention of Congress to them.

WHAT WILL THE DEMOCRATS DO?

For the first time since the melancholy day of James Buchanan, the democratic party is in command of the house of representatives and the executive department of the government and it will now have a chance to show how well it is qualified to govern the country.

What the democratic party lacks in congress is leadership. It has some bright and able men, but their influence has not been thrown in the right direction. Randall is one of the strongest men in the house—quick and able—but he is a protection democrat, and on the tariff question will not be in accord with a majority of his party. The fact is there is hardly a man on the democratic side of the house who can rise above his party and become a leader in pushing through such legislation as shall be an honor to the Forty-ninth congress. There is a good deal of work for congress to do. "The silver problem is pressing for a solution, the building of a navy and the rehabilitation of American shipping interests can not be delayed longer, home industrial interests are to be guarded from ominous foreign competitor, and all the varied questions which concern the government of a nation of nearly 60,000,000 of people, must be considered and passed upon." The attempt to escape the responsibility of acting on these measures will show imbecility and cowardice.

The republican leaders in the house will rise to the dignity of statesmen and will not retard the work of the session, but will work for the best results possible. But the responsibility of having a fruitful session at which all issues shall be wisely and promptly dealt with, rests with the democrats. The experience of the past, however, does not inspire the country that the democratic congress will do all things for the general good of the country. That has not been the policy of a democratic congress.

ABOUT THE LOYALTY OF MR. HENDRICKS.

JANESVILLE, Wis., Dec. 7th, 1885.
To the Editor:

I notice by reading frequent editorials in the Daily Recorder, our now democratic organ, that the editor of that paper is a strong advocate of the war, and insists that the late naval vice-president Thomas A. Hendricks, was, during the war, identified with the war democracy, and that while a member of the United States Senate he advocated and voted for all the war measures proposed by the republicans. Have you his war record? and was the republican party mistaken in questioning Mr. Hendricks' loyalty while he was in the seat?

INQUIRER.—Mr. Hendricks did not belong to the war democracy during his term in the Senate. He belonged to what was called the "peace democrats", for the reason that he did not believe the South could be brought to terms by fighting it. He did not vote for all the war measures proposed by the republicans, and in fact he voted for very few of them. In announcing the sudden death of Mr. Hendricks, the Gazette made the statement that he was in full sympathy with the slave power both before and after the war, and this statement can be corroborated by Mr. Hendricks' acts in the Senate. For instance, in 1864, he voted against giving colored men the right to appear as witnesses in United States courts.

In the same year he voted against the proposition to give the colored man the right to vote.

In that year he voted against a bill which sought to give colored people railway privileges in the District of Columbia.

In 1868 he voted against the bill declaring colored persons to be citizens of the United States, and in speech in the Senate he said "this bill is a wasp with the sting in its tail."

In 1868 he voted against the bill to exclude slavery in the territories of the United States.

The immortal and sublime event of 1865 was the passage of the famous Thirteenth amendment to the constitution forever prohibiting slavery in the United States. The enslavement of human beings had long been a dark and damning blot on the American map, and when congress voted on the great proposition that there shall be no more human slavery in the United States, Mr. Hendricks voted against it. Only two democratic senators voted for the amendment—the venerable Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, and James W. Neameth, of Oregon. All the opposition senators were democratic—four in number.

Mr. Hendricks also opposed the emancipation proclamation, although he was not in the Senate at the time of its issue. It will be seen from this record that Mr. Hendricks' sympathies were strongly enlisted for the slaves and that his prejudice against the colored race was deep and invincible all through the war and reconstruction period. While he voted for some of the war appropriations, a duty he could not fail to perform without placing himself in an absolutely hostile position toward the government, he opposed the reconstruction acts, and unfortunately did not, during his term in the Senate, stand side by side with the republicans and war democrats in demanding the there should be a vigorous prosecution of the war.

FESTIVAL HALL.

A trip to the south at this season of the year is one of the luxuries towards which many look with longing hearts, and none with greater longing than those who have enjoyed the privilege.

Therefore the trip has been, to say the least, a tedious one, and many would rather forgo the pleasure of a glimpse of this Garden of Eden than undertake the tiresome journey with all its details of railroad changes, poor meals, exorbitant carriage hire, hotel bills, etc. But we live in an age of grand achievements. These discomforts are things of the past. This trip to the South may be made today without any of these annoyances, thanks to the Monarch Parlor Sleeping Car Company, who have placed several of their luxurious Parlor Sleeping and Buffet Cars in service between Chicago and the South, and will send out Express Parties weekly during the winter season of 1886.

The tour, which will take about three weeks to complete, embraces among other important points in the South the following: New Orleans, and the following: Pensacola, Tallahassee, Gainesville, Orlando, the center of the great Orange groves; Silver Springs, on the Ocklawaha River; Orlando, and the picturesque lake region of South Florida; Grand Winter Park; Sanford; Lake Monroe; a daylight sail on the St. Johns River to Jacksonville; St. Augustine, Fernandina and Pensacola; Montgomery and Mobile, Alabama; Nashville, Tennessee.

An offensive and defensive alliance between Serbia and Bulgaria, against Turkey, is declared to be simply a question of time.

RESULTS OF THE ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The result of the English balloting is still very even. The Liberals, according to the latest figures obtainable, are two members short of a majority, and the Conservative party is in the lead.

The Liberal party is understood that Austria advises Prince Alexander to forego the war indemnity not withdrawn from Serbia, and Serbia in return to withdraw from Bulgaria and recognize the union of Bulgaria and eastern Roumania, being guaranteed territorial compensation elsewhere hereafter.

English influence is again predominant at the palace. The sultan is advised to send a note to the powers, proposing the autonomy of Roumania. England adheres to the creation of a neutral free state guaranteed by the powers. The porto deters action pending the result of Austria's note to Serbia and Bulgaria.

Treaty negotiations have been set on foot by Austria, based upon recognition of the occupation of Eastern Roumania and Bulgaria upon the basis of obtaining a favorable note from Vienna.

Therefore the trip has been, to say the least, a tedious one, and many would rather forgo the pleasure of a glimpse of this Garden of Eden than undertake the tiresome journey with all its details of railroad changes, poor meals, exorbitant carriage hire, hotel bills, etc. But we live in an age of grand achievements.

These discomforts are things of the past.

This trip to the South may be made today without any of these annoyances, thanks to the Monarch Parlor Sleeping and Buffet Cars in which these parties go.

They are something entirely new in the line of car construction, being an elegant Parlour car in the day time with luxuries, easy arm chairs, etc., besides all meals and baths on the car, hotel bills, etc., all comprised in the price of the trip, which is less than one-half what it would cost if undertaken by the individual.

red, white, and yellow; but upon nearer approach the words "Hennepin" or either side, flanked by Lake Michigan and Mississippi on either end, gave the cue to the house and raised a laugh when the tribute was laid before the blushing hero of Hennepin. The design was a canal boat heavily loaded with goods containing the chief products of the great northwest, and floating down the Mississippi and from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi river.

Raised a Crisis.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 8.—Secretary Larimer devotes a large portion of his annual report to the Indian question which he admits is not as well informed upon as he desires to be, for want of time to study it. He thinks, however, that the Indians are when something should be done to improve the condition of native wards and says the question has reached a point when a crisis in the history of the Indian race is at hand. He does not approve of an attempt to break up tribal relations completely, but advocates the placing of a few families of each tribe upon homesteads and adding to the number gradually as the success of the experiment develops itself. The unused lands should be sold and the proceeds invested for the benefit of the Indians. The Indians should be guaranteed secure enjoyment of their lands, and made perfectly removable, and made perfectly secure in the enjoyment of the fruits of their labor. He adds: "It is my duty to say that I do not believe that any measure of the government or efforts of philanthropy will of themselves solve the Indian problem, but that the Christian religion must and will be the chief instrumentality through which God's holy influences upon individual character, morals, and dispositions to regenerate and uplift this race from its present condition to a higher life and a nobler destiny."

The first thing after the roll was called by Gen. McClellan, was the question of the rights of the slaves and Indians, and offered a resolution that John Sherman be elected president pro tempore of the senate. Voorhees moved a resolution that Isham Harris, of Tennessee, be elected, which latter was defeated—yes, 29, nays 34. Sherman was then elected without division and upon taking the chair spoke as follows:

"SENATORS: I return you my grateful thanks for the high honor which you have conferred upon me. In common with all who rejoice over the sudden death of our vice-president, who by the constitution, is also declared to be the president of the senate. The contingency has now arrived when it becomes the imperative duty of the senate to elect a president pro tempore. In accepting the position assigned me I feel that there are many senators on either side of the house more apt in the discharge of the duties of this position, more experienced in the management of the Senate than myself. Still, I accept with the sincere desire that I may be able to enforce the rules with kindness and impartiality, so as to ascertain if possible the sense of the majority of the senate, and to give to the majority its full constitutional right and protection. With the sincere desire of performing this duty I appeal to each individual senator for his courtesy and forbearance."

After the presentation of the credentials of several senators, the arrival of Senator Logan and Blaine, and mutual congratulations to wait upon the president and house were appointed, and then Voorhees offered the following resolution, remarking that the offering of the same was the subject of his public life:

"Resolved, That the senate has received with profound sorrow the intelligence of the death of Thomas A. Hendricks, late vice-president of the United States, and for a number of years a distinguished member of this body."

"Resolved, That the business of the senate is suspended in order that the eminent public services and the representative virtues of the deceased may be appropriately commemorated."

"Resolved, That the secretary of the senate be directed to communicate these resolutions to the house of representatives."

The resolutions were adopted unanimously, and the senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 8.—The house of representatives was called to order at noon Monday, by J. B. Clark, clerk, and the roll of members called, showing a very full attendance. When nominations for speaker were declared in order, Tucker of Virginia presented the name of John Griffin, Carlisle of Kentucky, and Cannon of Illinois nominated Thomas B. Reed of Maine. Morrison of New York and Browne of Indiana were appointed tellers, and a vote taken, resulting in the election of Carlisle—177 to 138. Mr. Carlisle was escorted to the chair by Tucker and said:

"GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: In assuming the duties and responsibilities of this place for a second term I beg to return my most profound thanks for the nomination of your speaker. It is a privilege which I shall always remember with pride and gratitude."

"Nowhere else in the world can there be found a legislature assembly representing so great a constituency as that represented by this house, and certainly no similar body consisting of an equal number of members is its superior in point of ability and devotion to the interests intrusted to it. The privilege of presiding over the deliberations of such a body, very high and honorable distinction, no high and most honorable it can confer on any of its members—and I suppose it is such."

"But, gentlemen, my full appreciation of your action to-day, can best be shown by a conscientious and impartial discharge of my official duty, and, although it may not be wise to make pledges in advance, I venture to promise that to the fullest extent of my ability the law governing the proceedings of the house shall be evenly administered."

The oath of office having been administered the speaker and the members sworn in, the reading of the orders of the day were effected according to the Democratic custom, and were indited into their places.

The usual committee to wait upon the president was appointed, and the drawing for seats was announced as the next thing in order, whereupon Mills of Texas asked that the courtesy (Kelley of Pennsylvania) to take first choice of seats be granted as usual.

"It is a privilege which I shall always remember with pride and gratitude."

—Mr. W. H. Corneau is now engaged in re-furnishing the old "Farmer's hotel," East Milwaukee street, for many years under the management of Mr. Thomas Graham, and intends to re-open the house for the accommodation of the public. The location is a good one, and we see no reason why Mr. Corneau will not make a success in the hotel business.

—The Young Ladies' Working club of the First M. E. church, will hold a social at the residence of Mr. C. H. Square, corner of Holmes and Academy street on Wednesday evening of this week. Scalloped oysters and general refreshments will be served. Under the administration all the pelvic organs are strengthened and the woman becomes an embodiment of health and beauty which God intended her to be.
